

today, walking day #33

Posted on Jul 28, Posted by Administrator Category The Walk Blog

23 miles, 42,974 steps, found a very useable adjustable (Crescent) wrench, a number of bits, a small beat-up socket, two pennies, two nickels, one dime and a set of Saturn car keys, no car just the keys...saw three deer, one set of cyclists from Tennessee on their way to San Fran, and a group from Washington but they started in Jackson Hole, WY on their way to a nice little loop...same old gorgeous scenery, weather a wee bit warm but a constant breeze so walking life is good...getting close to having to decide the route through Alberta, sort of looks like we will get off #3 around Pincher Creek, game day decisions...been spending a good deal of time while on the road thinking about the official honorees, deceased and alive, having quite the time getting my brain around the randomness of life, the meaning of which I guess we get to assign...glad to be alive, glad to be able to walk...thanks again for all the honks 'n waves...live is good...cheers!!!

Tags: Untagged